I'm really sorry I didn't come to your show yesterday, but I forgot to tell you Mark asked me to give a couple of lectures instead of him. He suddenly had to organise the school trip. So I didn't get home until late. I went straight to bed and turned my phone off.

I'm back from Croatia. We saw some interesting sites including the amazing Kornati and Plitvice national parks. Some students from my group were unhappy because we didn't make it to Dubrovnik. Babies in photographs

When it comes to unusual careers, let's meet Kirsty Lacy. The first year after she graduated, she taught preschool but she needed a part-time job and that's how she found a job as a photographer at a hospital taking pictures of newborn babies.

The company she worked for had a contract with the hospital and the nurses used to take standard hospital pictures. But lifestyle photography was becoming more popular and they were looking for something better to offer. Kirsty was very talented. She'd take photos of the baby in different poses to offer the families nice baby pictures. "I leave sleeping babies' hands uncovered so you can admire their tiny fingers. When babies are awake, however, they tend to suck on their hands, which I find most adorable. In that case, I leave their tiny toes out instead. For more variety, I will often add a teddy bear or a little knitted animal for the baby to hold."

The job was pretty stressful for her as she had about 15 minutes to upload photos so the family could buy them later. And people would get impatient. They also think the babies are going to smile, and they do smile in their sleep by accident, but it's not because they're happy.

And now after 16 years and probably thousands of infants she has new career plans. "I quit while I was pregnant with my daughter, two years ago. I was 38 and had to stay in bed during my pregnancy. Honestly, I took hardly any pictures when I was in hospital after she was born. I was just enjoying taking care of myself and my baby. Now at 40, I'm going to start my own photography business. Actually, I'm in the middle of a computer digital photography course."

- 11 What was her full-time job after graduating?
- A Nurse.
 - B Teacher.
 - C Photographer.
- 12 Which pose of the newborns did she find the cutest?
- A A sleeping baby.
 - B A baby holding a teddy bear.
 - C A baby sucking on their hands.

13 How did she feel taking pictures of newborns?

- A Happy.
- B Stressed.
- C Impatient.

14 How old is Kirsty?

- A 36.
- B 38.
- C 40.

15 What is she doing presently?

- A She is teaching computer technology.
- B She is running a photography business.
- C She is taking a digital photography course.
